The ancient and chivalric order of the Knights of St. John and Malta, founded at Jerusalem in 1048, and established on this continent in 1970, has been the subject of con-siderable discussion during the past few weeks, and the order has gained considerable bandway by the amalgamation of the grand priory with the chapter general, the govern-ig body of the order.

The order is firmly established in the states of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Texas, Michigan and Illinois, and in the Dominion of Canada. It pays $1,000 at death in addition to the sick and funeral enefits provided for by the local encampments. Arrangements are being made for state grand priories, which will be confined to those states having not less than 500 mempers, nor less than five encampments. The next session of the chapter general will be held in Wellsville, N. Y., in September, by which time the membership will amount to about 4,000 in sixty encampments.

The past grand prior of the state of New Jersey, William Henry Beable, is one of the most enthusiastic of the recent accessions to the chapter general. Born at Plymouth, England, in ISSO, his arrival at manhood was promptly followed by the adoption of the United States as his future home. Mastering the pottery trade for the purpose of getting a position on the road, his love of travel was gratified by two years' service as a "drum-mer," during which time he traveled nearly 50,000 miles. He then settled down to his chosen sphere of journalism, and for the past four years has been editor and proprietor of 500 The Press and Anglo-American, a prosperous weekly published at Trenton, N. J.

He has always been identified with secret societies, having been a past grand of the Odd Fellows at the age of 21. He is also a Knight of the Golden Eagle, an A. P. A., Son of St. George and a member of the Improved Order 2 of Red Men.
